Doelstelling van de ANBI: Our strategy is based on empowering vulnerable people in food supply chains and holding companies accountable for business activities which violate international conventions and agreements. Fairfood is convinced that trade, done fairly, can improve the lives of millions of people working in food production thereby lessening dependence on aid.

Het beleidsplan

- Researching specific sustainability issues affecting vulnerable people in food supply chains
- Directly engaging with food and beverage companies to address the issues we uncover
- Raising the awareness and mobilizing public opinion to demand change
- Developing the capacity of our local partners empowering them to create change

De functie van de bestuurders Supervisory and Advisory Boards

The purpose of the Supervisory Board is to ensure that the Executive Director sets out a solid and sound general strategy, and that this strategy is implemented consistently. In addition, the Supervisory Board is responsible for supervising the Executive Board in managing the foundation. This board consists of at least five members, who are non-remunerated and have different backgrounds. Fairfood International has an Advisory Board consisting of an international network of prominent experts representing different nationalities and professional backgrounds. Their role is to provide relevant advice to the Executive Board on strategic matters and to expand the professional network of the organisation. The Advisory Board members support the organisation voluntarily; they have no legal fiduciary responsibility and no authority to vote on corporate matters. Whereas the Advisory Board provides such support, the Supervisory Board remains the formal employer and supervisor of the Executive Board. The Executive Board is ultimately responsible for achieving the overall objectives of the organisation and the successful implementation of Fairfood's programmes and activities.
